

GHS Theatre Students Selected As Young Playwright's Members

Grandview High School theatre students Omri Taylor and Dillon Cherry have been selected for membership to the 20th annual Young Playwrights' Roundtable. Only five students total were selected from their competing region. The Roundtable will be conducted by the Coterie Theatre's Artistic Director, Jeff Church, who is a professional playwright and director. Members of the Roundtable have the opportunity to meet and discuss their developing plays in a series of working sessions held at the Coterie.

Omri and Dillion, along with other GHS Theatre students, participated in the Coterie Theatre's Reaching the Write Minds playwriting workshop in October. Each of them submitted writing samples from the workshop activities.
